Health Program For Racing Pigeons

Contributed By
Cathy Hooper D.V.M
of the
Tralee Veterinary Hospital
to the Internet "Racing Pigeon Support" web site

There are other illnesses that the birds get but these are the big performance killers.

With most pigeon diseases, we can only treat the signs and keep them under control. Very few illnesses/diseases can be prevented. Paramyxovirus can be prevented by instilling a proper vaccine regime in your loft. I recommend all birds, including your stock birds, be vaccinated yearly.

This of course is after they are boosted 6-8 weeks after the first shot. Therefore, before breeding if the birds have never been vaccinated, vaccinate 2-1/2 months before breeding, booster in 6 weeks and this gives them one-month break before you breed.

With young birds, vaccinate 2 months before racing, again in 6 weeks before racing to fully recover (although I haven't seen any adverse reaction to this vaccine)

Note: Some flyers insist that the Newcastle vaccine is the same and is much cheaper & easier to use. Research indicates, that the immunity produced by this vaccine is very short lived and the birds will not be protected throughout the season.

Pox virus is another preventable disease. This disease is very common in young birds. This vaccine should be given at least 6 weeks before racing season or training your youngsters with other unvaccinated birds, as your birds will be contagious as long as they have a scab where you vaccinated them.

Preventative Treatment:

These diseases can be treated, not prevented.

Before Breeding:

- 1) Take fecal samples to your vet and check for worms and coccidia.

If positive for worms:

Roundworms, capillaria:

Suggested treatment Ivermectin 1/10 cc. per bird orally once.

Tape worms:

Droncit (1/4 cut pill per bird once)

Coccidia:

Amprol 1 tsp. per gallon.

Note: The wormer only removes what is in the birds at the time and doesn't prevent the bird from becoming re-infected again. A Clean dry loft management is essential.

- 2) If you have had problems with Salmonilla or E.Coli, I recommend have some feces cultured, by your vet. to ensure all diseases of this nature are not present. If the test is positive, the culture will also tell what the best drug to use is. As the resistance of some strains make blind medicating a more expensive and wasted practice.
- 3) Check for Canker: Visually examine throat of your birds and have your vet swab some of your birds to check under a microscope.

Treatment:

Ridsol - 3/4 tsp. per gallon 3-5 days.

Emtryl - 1/4 to 3/8 tsp. per gallon 3-5 days.

Note: Emtryl has been shown to cause infertility in some birds. Use Ridzol if it is available in your area.

Before Racing & during Race Season:

- 1) I suggest that you regularly submit fecal samples to your vet for analysis and treat only if needed. I don't believe in drugging your birds every week if they don't need it.
- 2) This applies to canker also.
- 3) Check regularly for respiratory disease:

Signs: If you see bubbles form in the corner of the eye when you press on the waddle. Or when you put a bird's beak next to your ear, you will hear a distinct " puff " each time it breathes.

Treat the birds for 10 days before the season starts and 3 days at the beginning of each week during race season only if necessary.

A good drug combination is: Tylocine - 2 tsp. Per gallon mixed with Doxycycline - 7 tsp. per gallon.

Note: Caution, when using combined preparations from supply houses. I find them diluted and only partially effective. The birds tend to get sick again because these drugs aren't used at the correct dosage and for the correct amount of time.
